ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Thank you, Southern Wisconsin Butterfly Association (SWBA) Chapter of the North American Butterfly Association (NABA), for allowing this text a wider airing online. I immensely appreciate the excellent help of Ann Thering for reading and commenting on the manuscript, and for guiding this to web publication. Even more I appreciate her impressive patience and willingness to be drafted to this project. I am also very grateful to Karl Legler who helped this publication come into being. I also thank the many lepidopterists, butterflyers, agency staff, and funders of butterfly research for their contributions to butterfly and habitat knowledge and for inspiring questions to ask. I also appreciate you the reader for being willing to consider the ideas expressed here. The views expressed here are solely my own. I hope I've stated clearly and accurately what I mean, but apologize where I inadvertently have not. Scott Swengel and I thank our families for their patience and understanding as we've enthusiastically pursued our studies of birds and butterflies and their habitats. Most of all, I thank my husband Scott for our wonderful adventure together in surveying, analyzing, and learning.
